Intimate Glimpses Into District Happenings as Seen By Roving Reporters

A well-known newspaper man of this city, whose name is withheld under threats of assault and battery upon the person of the writer, challenges to mortal combat the author of the statement, "clothes make the man."

The scene was the first tee on the municipal golf links, the time was one day last week and the principals were the scribe and a man or plensing personality who requested the pleasure of playing a round with him. Both were attired in the conventional tweed.

The scribe had an off day. He sliced and hooked his drives, went off on his iron shots and punctuated each and every mislay with what he claimed to be an appropriate expletive.

At the close of the game his companion offered to give him a lift in his car as soon as he changed back into street clothes, and the scribe accepted with thanks.

"Now try to imagine my embarrassment," the hard-boiled newspaper man asked, "when my companion showed up attired as a clergyman. It was Father Tierney, I learned later."

In this dizzy age of everyone-for-himself, the evidence that someone has stopped to consider the common good for some minutes, is a thing of gain, always strikes a pleasing note.

At the Fourteenth street entrance to the District Building, just inside the door, is a public drinking fountain for the use of the public. Thousands of people have stopped there to drink and pass on. But one man, an employee of the building, considered the height of the fountain from the floor and returned with two wooden steps so the children might drink.

There is no denying the fact that European influences are making their way into this country. We have English-cut clothes, Scotch brookes, Alpine chapeaus, French gloves, and now a window on Ninth street is displaying trousers with ball bottoms, silk a la Madrid.

A newsboy stood on Sixteenth street with a bundle of papers nearby his own side, watching the auto traffic. He was waiting for some minutes. Finally he selected one, waved to the driver, who stopped and took him aboard. The driver later told of the conversation.

"You did you let the machine in front of me pass and hall me," the driver inquired of the youngster.

"A chauffeur was drivin' me," was the answer.

"Yes, but maybe some rich lady was sittin' in the car with you, and she has taken you in and who can tell—maybe adopted you."

"Say, mister," laughed the mite, "you better stop goin' to these movies," and then, getting serious, he explained that it wasn't being done.

"It's the guys who drive them themselves that give you the lift," and he gave his age as eight years old.

The dentist had just attached that instrument used by the profession to remove the top of the head by opening the mouth wide enough to allow work without interference, when the fire bell rang.

As in all other properly organized offices of the government, this is a sign to the Bureau to abandon ship immediately. So the dentist and his staff withdrew without further formalities, leaving the veteran to his own devices.

Having been thrown upon his own resources before the former soldier wondering why anyone should complain about the trenches, rushed into the street looking like a fugitive from the Spanish Inquisition.

The fire bell having been pronounced a success, the instrument of torture eventually was extracted; but from now on fire drills are going to be one of the pet aversions of at least one former soldier.

PEEL OFF TROLLEY POLES IN ROADWAY STIRS NORTHEAST

Bladensburg Association Will Lead Fight for Their Removal.

Removal of trolley poles from the center of Bladensburg road will be an important topic for discussion during the fall by various citizens' associations in the Northeast section.

The present system of having the trolley poles in the center of the roadway is regarded as extremely dangerous by residents in the vicinity of Fifteenth and H streets and Bladensburg road. Numerous accidents have resulted from automobiles colliding with the poles, it is said.

The Bladensburg Road Citizens Association, which is the latest organization to join the ranks of the civic bodies, intends to take up the question of the removal of the poles during their fall meetings and it is probable that the Northeast Washington and Trinidad Associations will also get behind the movement.

RANDLE HIGHLANDS CITIZENS TO RENEW BRIDGE CAMPAIGN

Will Appeal to Authorities for New Structure At 17th and Avenue.

Randle Highland citizens will redouble their efforts during the fall and winter for the purpose of obtaining favorable action toward the replacing of the old Pennsylvania avenue bridge at the foot of Seventeenth street, and Pennsylvania avenue southeast with a new structure.

Characterizing the present bridge as being "obsolete," the residents feel that the structure is an eyesore to the community. The majority of persons living in that section have declared that a new bridge would put the finishing touches to that locality.

Through the Randle Highland Citizens' Association an appeal will be made to the Army Engineer Corps for drawings of a suitable bridge. Plans are being made to place the matter before the District Commissioners and to have the Commissioners recommend the new bridge to the Federal Government.

A request will be made for an adequate appropriation.

One of the main reasons for the request is the belief of the association officials that by a new structure of persons living in that section will be able to obtain trolley service to Randle Highlands.

At present the Capital Traction trolley cars are forced to stop at Seventeenth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast. Passengers are compelled to transfer to a car of lighter weight in order to cross the bridge.

The present structure, according to officials, is not strong enough to hold heavy traffic.

In the near future residents intend pointing out that Randle Highlands is the only community in the District that has not through trolley service. Reference will also be made to the effect that the bridge has on the section as some of the main arteries to Maryland.

All associations in the neighborhood including the Anacostia Board of Trade are in favor of quick action on the contemplated new structure.

The present structure, according to officials, was built about 25 years ago. It has a framework of iron with wooden flooring.

The entire basement of the Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, Fourth and B streets southeast, is being renovated. The work is expected to be completed before Christmas. The loose stones around the steepie are being removed.

The new plans call for a dining room and kitchen to be located in the rear of the basement. New flooring will be laid in the Sunday school room. The church pews will be replaced and the church will be rededicated.

Arrangements are being made for a Halloween social to be held at the church, Monday, October 30. The pastor, Rev. Freely Rohrer, is completing elaborate arrangements.

Lions Club Will Raise Fund To Place Big Instrument In New Building.

One of the finest pipe organs in the United States is to be built in the new Washington Auditorium, now in course of erection at Eighteenth street and New York avenue, according to an announcement yesterday at a luncheon of the Lions Club at the New Willard Hotel.

The organ, which will cost between $40,000 and $60,000, will be given by a fund to be raised under the auspices of the local organization. Lions from all parts of the United States and Canada will be asked to subscribe to the fund, but the local members, it is declared, will contribute less than the sum allotted to Lions outside of Washington.

Addressing the club on the work of the United States Railroad Administration, George W. Russ, assistant director, declared that the administration would complete its work within another year. Out of a total of $1,200,000,000 of claims against the government following return of the railroads to their owners, Mr. Russ said, the administration will be able to settle with payment of only 22 percent of that amount. Already, he declared, 75 percent of the claims have been adjusted.
